

Vine Views

20 great wines I drank this summer

Edward Deitch reveals some favorite finds from around the globe

For the most part in this space, I focus on one or two wines a week, telling their stories, including why I like them, what makes them noteworthy, where they come from and what foods you might enjoy them with.

Of course, like most wine critics, I taste far more good wines than I can write about, and this summer that was especially true. So I thought it would be useful to offer something different for a change, to mention, in brief, 20 wines that stood out over the last few months. As you'll see, the list is diverse in terms of variety, region and price, but all the wines were impressive in their own ways and deserve to be on this "highly recommended" list.

Classico

Riserva

I Molino di Grace 2004 Chianta Classico

Tuscany, Italy. Blueberry, plum and sweet oak, $20.

II Molino di Grace 2003 Chianta Classico Riserva

Tuscany, Italy. Great fruit and elegance, $29.

